DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Orr Farmhouse is a very large masonry dwelling five bays long by two deep and two and a half storeys in height. Extending from the back of this structure is a two storey rear wing. The entire house has a gable roof with slate shingles. The front section has double inside end chimneys in each gable wall while the rear wing has a single inside end chimney in its north gable wall. Due to the stucco and whitewash which has been applied to the exterior surface of the house it is applied to determine whether the house was built of stone or brick, but I believe brick. The roof has two double window gable roofed dormers evenly spaced on the facade side of the roof. The house has a central bay entrance with a transom and sidelights. Across the facade is a one storey porch. The interior was not open for investigation;

The farm has several old outbuildings but they have been altered by modern siding and roofing materials. The most noteworthy of these structures is the barn.
